

EIGHT KILLED IN MINE BY GAS AFTER BLAZE

Men Overcome in Copper
Workings and Rescuers
Die with Them.

ANACONDA, Mont., June 8.—One of the most serious accidents in the history of coal mining in Montana has occurred in the mines of the Northern Pacific, at Rocky Fork, near Red Lodge, Carbon County.

Eight men are dead, all victims of the white damp that filled the corridors of the mine after the fire, which occurred Wednesday. Their bodies have been recovered, but the story of the work of rescue parties is a tale of unexcelled bravery and heroic self-sacrifice.

Of the dead two were members of one of the parties that entered the mine in the effort to reach the men known to be there.

The dead:
HERNANCE FLEMING
WILLIAM BAILEY
MIKE GARRAGE
THOMAS KELLEY
L. M. DUFFY
MATT REIKKA
JOE CAREY
JOE BRACEY

Carey and Bracey were of the rescue party.

The fire which caused the trouble started in incline No. 6 Wednesday. This was believed to be under control after a long, hard fight. At 7:30 A. M. yesterday the first rescue party started down No. 6 incline, proceeding cautiously, as it was found that there were still traces of fire. When they reached a depth of 1,200 feet all were overcome.

Several machines to struggle back to where they could be reached.

By this time a dense column of smoke burst from No. 6 incline, and the air in No. 6 was so foul that volunteer rescuers were driven back. At 10 o'clock another rescue party was formed, business and towns people volunteering when the Finnish miners fled back, terrified.

The scene about the mines was distressing. Frantic women and crazed men ran about, hampering the work of rescue. The second volunteer party was successful. The fans were reversed and the smoke forced back out of No. 6 incline. In the slopes brattices were made of canvas and water was let in. The rescuers were let down slowly in cars. They first found the unconscious forms of six of the first rescue party, which were hurried to the surface. All were revived, but Carey and Bracey.

SQUEAKY SHOES BETRAY A THIEF

Noisy Footgear Warn Saloon-
Keeper of Till-Tappers' Operations.

The next time "Pete" Gilmartin tries to rob a till, he will wear slippers. Because his shoes squeaked he was caught, and to-day he was sent to the Harlem Court in $1,000 bail for trial.

His pal, William Doldorf, who carried a Rogers' Gallery around with him, swived examination and was also sent in the same amount.

Frank Reiner keeps a saloon at One Hundred and Forty-fifth street and Broadway avenue. Two men came in last night and sat at a table. They had several drinks, and Reiner went to the rear and sat with Frank Runcke, who lives next door. The bar was hidden from their sight by a pile of whiskey barrels.

When Reiner heard the "squeak-squeak" of new shoes he tipped out and found Gilmartin busy behind the bar. When the saloon-keeper asked what he was doing there Gilmartin said he was looking for matches.

Reiner looked in the till and found it had been rifled. Then he reached for his gun. The twin were just dissolving through the door as Reiner opened fire. Doldorf disappeared, but Gilmartin threw up his hands. He squeaked back and stood in a corner, while Reiner telephoned for the police. As he hung up the receiver the door opened again and Doldorf entered. He threw down a roll of money.

"Take the stuff," he cried, "and call it off."

Reiner picked up the roll and found it to be short. He pointed the gun at Doldorf and he too, stood up in the corner. Policemen came from all directions, attracted by the noise. At the station, on Doldorf was found a collection of three pictures of the most notorious racketeers in New York, with their names written below.

When arrested in court Gilmartin denied pulling the trigger, saying that he was not one of the "Valley gang" that hangs out in a lot on the corner of 145th street and Broadway.

Gilmartin was arrested two weeks ago charged with procuring the "Valley Gang" of Yonkers, who had come down to attack one of the gang. He was discharged for lack of evidence. Witnesses said that he was in the rear of a machine gun in the street. He was put out by a policeman.

SWILL FATTENED MEAT SENT HERE FROM JERSEY

Lean Cattle, Crippled Sheep and Flabby Hogs
Fed on Hotel Refuse Added to New York's Food Supply.

Not all the garbage collected in New York every day goes into the incineration plants conducted by the Street-Cleaning Department, nor is it sunk to the depths of the sea from scows. A big proportion of it is used to feed live stock that is killed, dressed and sold to the people of this city in the form of meat. In other words, an amazing amount of our garbage comes back to us in the shape of food.

Some hotels and restaurants in New York dispose of their garbage to feeding and fattening concerns with headquarters on the edges of the New Jersey Meadows, back of Union Hill and West Hoboken.

A man whose business takes him into the New Jersey slaughter-houses and among the meat purveyors declared today to an Evening World reporter that conditions in Jersey City were no better than in Chicago. When asked whether inspectors made their regular rounds he laughed.

"Inspectors?" he replied. "I have never seen an inspector. There are cattle killed in Jersey City that are not fit to feed to wild animals. Any of them sick? Well, I should say so—so sick that there's no need to kill them. Go and ask how many dead animals are received at the reduction plants. When the dead ones get it they had to depend on the cattle that die in the pens for their fertilizing material they'd get left. I guess more have been sent out that way since the exposure in Chicago than for weeks before. The local Board of Health? It doesn't interfere. I don't believe it has any jurisdiction. Anyway, everybody does as he pleases."

"YOU OUGHT TO GO DOWN TO THE SLAUGHTER-HOUSE ON MARKET DAY. YOU'LL GET UP AGAINST CATTLE THAT SMELL SO YOU CAN'T BREATHE WITHIN TEN PAGES OF THEM."

Sick Cattle Slaughtered.

Another worker in the Jersey City yards admitted in a surly manner that many of the cattle were sick when killed, "but," he added, "that don't hurt no one."

Out at Secaucus, N. J., are several farms and stables where cattle are brought from the country. This is the home of the "swillmongers." Here poor and lean kine, sickly and crippled sheep, calves with lung affections and flabby pigs are fed up into something in the semblance of what they should be.

The nourishment which assists in the fattening process consists of "scullies" travellers brought him. Several small boys made a pretty penny by bringing forward cards which more modest tourists did not dare to present in person.

The game did not go away without a catch. "How much do you want?" "What do you pay for your clothes?" "How much do you give to your mother?" are samples of his questions. One bright chap, asked what he intended to do when he grew up, replied aptly "I'm going to be a petroleum king." Mr. Rockefeller laughed heartily.

Mr. Rockefeller showed that the result of his quest for information was a good impression of the Normandy folk, probably because they have a world-wide reputation for thrift.

The Standard Oil magnate threw off all reserve while he was among the simple people of Normandy. In return he absorbed an amount of information at first hand he could never have acquired any other way. Actually he was like a schoolboy out for a lark, and he is delving deeply into the problem of their lives.

"It is good to see and to study and to try to know your fellow men; to observe the differences in individuals and nations; to learn to love more to pity, above all, to be wisely tolerant," said Mr. Rockefeller before he left Cherbourg.

Mr. Rockefeller asks questions incessantly. No one escapes him. Street urinals are as much an object of interest to him as any other human product, and he is delving deeply into the problem of their lives.

"It is good to see and to study and to try to know your fellow men; to observe the differences in individuals and nations; to learn to love more to pity, above all, to be wisely tolerant," said Mr. Rockefeller before he left Cherbourg.

BAILEY WILL NOT SUCCEED GORMAN

Choice of Democratic Senators Points to Blackburn as Floor Leader.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Despite his prominence during the present session of Congress, Senator Joseph Bailey, of Texas, will not be chosen as the Democratic floor leader in succession to Senator Gorman. The choice of the Democratic Senators, from present indications, will be Senator Joseph Blackburn, of Kentucky. His selection will probably be made at a Democratic Senatorial caucus called for Saturday.

As Senator Blackburn's term expires next March and his re-election is most uncertain, his selection will be tantamount to a stinging vote of lack of confidence in Senator Bailey. The Texas Senator has not been popular with his colleagues while acting leader, because of his dictatorial methods and his lack of diplomacy. His savage attack on the newspaper correspondents from the floor of the Senate during the rate bill debate is cited as a case in point.

Quite an Advantage.

(From the Cleveland Leader.)

"When you are wandering about among these magnificent autumn woods and immemorial rocks, do you not often wish that you were a savage—a rude, untutored child of nature?"

"Indeed I do. Then I wouldn't be able to read the advertising signs they stick all over the scenery."

There are a number of these places about Secaucus and Pennington Creek, and they are owned by some of the largest of the most concerns. The loyalty of self-interest is strong among men who work there. They do not talk readily of their business, and most of them being of a strata of society several degrees lower than one would believe existed, conversation is not an edifying occupation.

"THESE SWILLMONGERS" SUPPLY THE NEW YORK MARKET.

To Begin an Inspection.

The Jersey City Board of Health is about to begin an inspection of the slaughter-houses at the present time, representations having been made to them in this direction. Hitherto it has been the duty of the Board to care for the sanitary condition of the slaughter-houses and the inspection of meat and meat is done by the Government.

The Board also issues a yearly permit to people who wish to maintain a slaughter-house and may be called in at any time on complaint or at the request of any one. Failing such a summons for inspection, the slaughter-houses are only inspected once each year.
